Interoperability Expertise

Ready Computing has been at the forefront of defining, developing, and validating the framework and standards that drive health information interoperability.

Our proven implementation methodology is grounded in project management best practices, quality, and risk management, enabling us to lead you successfully through your most complex projects.

“Ready Computing has been far more than a vendor, they have been a partner. Their team has provided us with the right expertise when we needed it. Ready has a strong technical team who have ensured the success of our large HIE implementation. They have helped us with integration-related issues, as well as with resolving operational issues as part of our go-live.”

Ready Computing works with you to develop solutions that meet your unique needs – whether that involves deploying Ready Computing software applications, creating client-specific applications from scratch, or implementing an application from one of our trusted partners.
